School are a go. Gov. Neil Abercrombie has released $618,000 to Friends of Volcano School of Arts & Sciences. The money will be used for planning, architectural, permitting and engineering fees for construction of 15 new classrooms, a new restroom and a multi-purpose building on the Keakealani Outdoor Education Center campus on Haunani Road in Volcano Village. The school has a 60-year lease from the Department of Education.

With release of the funding, the school hopes to finalize its use permit, obtain a building permit and begin construction. Smith said 13 contractors have volunteered to build a classroom, "which goes a long way to making this happen. We also have 142 volunteers on the ground who can help with painting, installing windows and doors and other tasks."

Ruderman said his own staff in the Senate "worked really hard on the issue, writing letters and making phone calls." Ruderman congratulated the community, the school staff and the children for their efforts in raising funds and going to the Legislature.

The more than 1,200-acre Kaunamano properties are listed as the fourth-highest priority for purchase in the 2012 Annual Report of the Public Access, Open Space, and Natural Resources Preservation Commission. Cultural, archaeological and natural resources, along with education, recreation and preserving scenic vistas are reasons given in the nomination papers for Kaunamano by Ka 'Ohana O Honu'apo. A 50-lot subdivision had been considered on the property.

The property extends from the pasture below Honu'apo Lookout on Hwy 11 to the ocean and four miles down the coast. Several plans have been made to subdivide the slope below the lookout into 20-acre agricultural lots to build houses that would give buyers views of Honu'apo and the Ka'ū Coast all the way to Hawai'i Volcanoes National Park. The houses would be built on what is now in pasture and in the view plane of the lookout.

Ka'ū Shows its Talent at Merrie Monarch, Specialty Coffee & Ka'ū Coffee Festivals

Ka'ū talent has been on the road. In late April at the Merrie Monarch Festival in Hilo, Melia Kau'ikeonalani Carmen Taganas, of Pāhala, competed in the Miss Aloha Hula contest. Miss Ka'ū Coffee contenders promoted the local brew in the annual Merrie Monarch Parade as talented coffee roasters and Hawaiian entertainers warmed up the SCAA event in Seattle, returning for the Ka'ū Coffee Festival rolling out ten days of events May 2 - 11.

Taganas not only shined in Miss Aloha Hula. She joined her hula sisters of Hālau Na Le Hiwahiwa 'O Ku'ualoha, under the direction of Kumu Hula Sammye Ann Ku'ualoha Young, for the hula kahiko and hula 'auana competitions at Merrie Monarch.

Taganas is the daughter of Jay Taganas, of Pāhala, who works at Ka'ū Hospital. A graduate of Kamehameha School in Kea'au, she has represented Ka'ū in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York and the Rose Bowl Parade in Pasadena, CA

"Within these next few weeks I will be completing a dream that I've had for as long as I can remember," Taganas shared on Facebook before the competition. "I mahalo everyone who has helped, supported, challenged and changed me for the better. As we do before going into any ceremony, we leave all of our pilikia behind. I walk into the future cleansed with nothing but positive mana'o. I look forward to what the future holds and Ka'ū Coffee Festival, pg. 3 planned to retire here, create a music studio and continue teaching local youth and people from afar his skills in slack key, 'ukulele, harmonica, singing and songwriting. However, he lost a battle with lung cancer at age 61 on April 28.

Kamakahi is the composer of more than 500 songs and master of slack key guitar, music composition and harmonica. He spent a week each November in Pāhala, where he taught local youth on scholarships and adults from around the world and provided the community with a free concert with his friends George and Keoki Kahumoku, Sonny Lim, John and Hope Keawe and many more. Kamakahi inspired many Ka'ū young musicians to write songs, to tell stories and to approach life with humor and love.

Kamakahi was not only a musician but also a Christian minister, providing his fans with both a spiritual and Hawaiian musical

He said, each year when he was here, that his long-term plan was to move to Nā'ālehu where his wife grew up, and that he aimed to set up a recording studio there.

Many of Kamakahi's songs are standards of Hawaiian music. He composed Wahine 'Ilikea, Pua Hone and Koke'e. He earned Nā Hōkū Hanohano Awards and brought home three Grammy awards. Formerly one

Ka'ū Chapter Farmers Union United Seeks Members

Hawai'i Farmers Union United drew enough commitments during its organizing meeting to secure a Ka'ū Chapter. Leaders of the statewide organization came to Pāhala Community Center to explain the purpose of the national organization.

Local chapter organizer Malian Lahey, who has a farm in Wood Valley, said she approached Farmers Union United after learning that Ka'ū Coffee is being sold for blending. "It hurts my business," and it damages the Ka'ū Coffee farmers' reputation, said the coffee broker, noting that Hawai'i Farmers Union United has sponsored legislation to require labeling that would declare all origins used in blended coffee.

Most of the blended Ka'ū Coffee is sold under the name Alan Wong, who has championed Ka'ū Coffee at his restaurants for years and earlier encouraged farmers to keep the coffee pure. The labeling says 10 percent Ka'ū Coffee without naming the origin of the rest of the coffee used in the blend. It sells at a fraction of the price of pure Ka'ū Coffee, which a number of the farmers sell under their own brand names.

Vince Mina, president of Hawai'i Farmers Union United, reminded attendees that the organization is not a labor union. It represents family farms and focuses on the health of the soil and sustainable agricultural practices, he said. Mina said the national organization was created by farmers over a century ago to help farmers. He contended that the Farm Bureau was formed ten years later by corporate interests. "The Farm Bureau was organized to keep farmers from being organized."

Hawai'i Farmers Union United said that they have gained traction in building awareness in government regarding "soil health." They talked about the difference between mining and farming, with mining usconditions needed for crops, while farming in a sustainable way builds soil health. Several of the group's leaders talked about the direction of agriculture in Hawai'i. "Are you killing Bob Shaffer talked about ating the soil?" was one of the mantras.

Another involved breaking down the word agriculture. "Agri-Culture. Cultures are living," said Mina. He said that farmers and governments need to give more support to the "culture." Government has traditionally given the most support to agribusiness, he said

Those attending also talked about education and possibly helping to revive agricultural programs at Ka'ū High School and also education for adults who may want to learn to farm

Ka'ū Coffee College Draws Experts

Leaders of the specialty coffee industry are traveling to Ka'ū for the Ka'ū Coffee Festival and the Ka'ū Coffee College, to be held Sunday, May 11 at Pāhala Community Center. According to Ka'ū Coffee Festival Chair, Chris Manfredi, they want to see the state's largest agricultural district and taste and see all the effort that goes into awardwinning Ka'ū coffee.

They include a leading voice for seedto-cup sustainability, Mark Inman of California, and Blake Hanacek of Canada, a proponent of sustainable rural development and agribusiness management. The men headline the Ka'ū Coffee Festival's annual reverse trade mission

Richard CREAGAN (D) State House

Aloha!

It is my honor to serve as the new State Representative for District 5 (South Kailua-Kona to Na'alehu). In January, after Rep. Denny Coffman resigned to care for a family member, the Governor appointed me to finish his term. When Denny's House district expanded into Ka'u, I enjoyed introducing him to the community. At the time he encouraged me to run for his position when he stepped down.

In 1966, I came to Hawaii to train as a healthcare worker before being sent to the Marshall Islands as part of the Peace Corps. After many years of practicing medicine on the mainland, I returned to Hawaii in 1991 to work as an emergency room doctor at Kona Hospital. My wife, Marilyn, is a nurse who also works there. We live and farm in the Kiolaka'a area of Ka'u.

As a doctor and a farmer, I have a particular interest in medical and agricultural issues. As a former teacher, I also have a strong interest in education and am very supportive of charter schools.

I am now running to be elected for another term and humbly ask for your support. I look forward to hearing from you as this will help me be a true Representative.

Protection of the marine and shoreline natural resources are necessary to provide these resources to future generations as marine resources in other areas of Hawai'i Island become 'fished out,'" the proposal

"Because of the four-wheel-drive access and the continued use of the coastline by Ka'ū residents, educational opportunities to instruct local students (and their families) in ancient and modern methods of sustainable fishing and shell-fish picking using values of kuleana (responsibility) and mālama (taking care) would greatly increase the motivation and ability of future residents to preserve and protect the natural resources in this area."

The proposal mentions the Hwy 11 pullout and overlook for visitors as having "incredible ocean vistas. This same overlook and area attracts dozens of kite-flyers from around the island almost every weekend of the year for recreational purposes."

"Because there are no trees on this land, the huge, open vistas from the top of the property down to the shoreline allow ocean views almost unparalleled from any other site in Ka'ū. Kaunamano's natural beauty is so vast that the tourist overlook at one end of the property above Honu'apo Bay attracts scores of visitors year-round to park and enjoy the views that extend from Punalu'u on the north to near the south end of Kaunamano," the nomination papers say.

Ka'ū Wins First BIIF Volleyball Island Championship

For the first time in history, the boys Ka'ū Trojans volleyball team took the island championship in Division II. Let by Coach Joshua Ortega, the team bore some losses to Kamehameha, Hilo, Pāhoa, Waiākea and Honoka'a, but came out on top at the Division II playoffs. Kamehameha won the Division I playoffs. During the season, Ka'ū overcame Ehunui, Kealakehe, Konawaena, Kohala, Christian Liberty, Kea'au and Hawai'i Preparatory Academy. The team is comprised of Chance Emmsley-Ah Yee, Cameron Enriques, Kehie Serrao, Larry Al-Navarro, Franklin Orcino, Jr., Brian Gascon, Anthony Emmsley-Ah Yee, Lehre Vidal and Jovan Padrigo. The team will travel to O'ahu the second week in May to participate in the Hawai'i High School Athletic Association state tournament. Donations to help the team travel to the tournament can be made through calling the school at 313-4100 or 928-2088 and contacting Athletic Director Kalei Namohala.

During the playoffs held at Kealakehe High School Gym, Ka'ū beat HPA in three sets in the semi-final, which ensured a trip to the state finals. The final match against Honoka'a Dragons earned the Trojans the BIIF championship. The Trojans defeated Honoka'a in five sets. Cameron Enriques contributed 29 kills, Larry-Dan Al-Navarro had 14 kills, and Brian Gascon served five aces. Scores were 26-28, 25-17, 25-20, 16-25 and 15-13.

Boys & Girls Club Offers Late Summer Fun

Boys & Girls Club is offering a sale of fundraising dinners to help kids who want to attend  $P\bar{a}$ hala and Ocean View Boys and Girls Club Summer Fun. The Boys and Girls Club Summer Fun program is after the County of Hawai'i Summer Fun program, so keiki involved in both will have full and enriching days of activities in a safe environment during the summer break. The program is eight weeks long and runs from June 2 to July 25 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The dinner will raise funds for families who are not able to pay the $100 program registration fee. Dinner tickets are $7, with the menu consisting of oriental chicken, rice, mixed vegetables and sweet bread. Dinner pick-up is Friday, May 16 at Pāhala Community Center from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Interested parents or anyone who would like to assist with the fundraiser by making a donation, selling tickets or helping to prep and serve on the day are urged to call Boys and Girls Club Director Dolly Kailiawa at 756-5282 or Lei at 929-8641. The amount awarded to families will depend on the total profit received from the fundraiser.

Summer Fun Early Registration May 5 - 8

Ka'ū Summer Fun fundraising dinners held in Pāhala and Nā'ālehu this spring were successful in providing scholarship funds that will help keiki meet registration fees for the Hawai'i County Department of Parks and Recreation program. Organizers thanked all who assisted with the fundraisers.

"Support from parents, community members and organizations helped to make the fundraisers a success," said Nona Makuakane, who leads the Pāhala Summer Fun program. "Thank you to Leina'ala Enos of Queen Lili'uokalani Children's Center, who was instrumental in helping us getting

County Funds Coffee Run & Fishing Tourney

OKK plans another running event, similar to the 2011 race on the cane haul road above Nā'ālehu. The first, however, is planned for September on the trails above Ka'ū Coffee Mill.

Two county council resolutions passed in April Ka'ū Kākou. The community organization will receive to provide grants for sporting events sponsored by 'O $7,000 for the annual Punalu'u Keiki Fishing Tournament at Punalu'u Beach next year and $15,000 for the Coffee Trail Runs and Fun Day scheduled for Sept. 20 on the trails above Ka'ū Coffee Mill. The runs, including a half marathon, could be held in future years during the ten days of the Ka'ū Coffee Festival starting as early as 2015, said one of the organizers, Myra Sumida, during a recent meeting of the Ka'ū Coffee Festival Committee. OKK held such a run on the old cane haul road between Pāhala and Nā'ālehu in 2011 to help raise money for the recently completed Bay Clinic. OKK plans to make the new half marathon more cross country, rather than on pavement, she said.

He also said that growers of food can look forward to more people being concerned about the fresh food they are consuming and paying for it. "One day there will be an app when we can take our produce to market and you get paid for the nutrient density." He predicted that farmers who "aloha 'āina the soils will be rewarded."

Soil health expert Bob Shaffer told Ka'ū farmers that tillage management to keep the ground from becoming hard and compacted is one of the important practices for successful farming. He said that no amount of composting or cover crops and good minerals management can overcome the fact that soil needs structure with space, air and water. He differentiated free-living microorganisms from those that kill plants and said that all of the beneficial "microorganisms also need to be healthy." Shaffer explained that tiny organisms help to break down organic matter, which releases nutrients into the soil, which are eaten by bacteria. Free-living nematodes eat bacteria and pass the waste full of nitrogen right onto the roots of the plants. Growth-promoting enzymes for the plants are also produced. Microbes also break down toxins. "It is a symbiosis between plant and microbe," he said.

The plants recognize the value of the microbes, and about half of the sugars made by the plants are exuded by their roots to help feed them. The relationship leads to disease prevention and some resistance to pests, he said.

Shaffer, who has a farm in Kona, said that he has been working for farms from macadamia orchards in Oueensland. Australia to truck farms in California with organic matter management with compost and cover crops to mineral and tillage management. He also works with compost manufacturing in Dixie, CA, with 250 tons of food waste a day brought from San Francisco. The compost is sold to farmers.

Stars over Ka'ū - May 2014

by Lew Cook

Jupiter sets in the western sky in Gemini near chart time (10 p.m. mid-month, an hour later early in the month and an hour earlier near the end of the month).

Comet 209P LINEAR, a wimp of a comet discovered in 2004, passed about 58 million miles from Jupiter in February 2012. While that seems far, it was close enough to have its orbit tweaked so that it (the orbit) will cross Earth's orbit. Earth will approach nearest the orbit only 280,000 miles away on May 23.

Look at the sky, overhead facing north, on May 23 in the early evening as it is getting dark. Dust and pebbles shed from the comet in its calculated 25 passes from 1803 to 1924 are going to be spread out along the path of the comet and will appear as meteors. Expect to see about one every few minutes if the predictions come true. You may see more. Mentally trace the paths back. If the path is near Pole star and slightly west, you've seen one of them. This sprinkling of comet dust will start about 7:40 p.m., peak around 9:10 p.m. and be over by 10:50 p.m.

Saturn is in Libra. It rose about 6:15 p.m., and at midnight it is high up in the sky, nearly overhead. It ends these May nights setting at sunrise. It will be directly opposite the sun on May 10.

Mars rose at about 3:20 p.m. and sets almost exactly 12 hours later. Mars decreases in brightness by a factor of two from mid-March until mid-May as we grow further apart.

On the day the chart is timed for, May15, the moon will be one day past full. It is the brightest object in the night sky and will wash out faint stars, but it is a great time to look at Mars and Saturn.

The moon is also a fascinating object to look at if you've got a steady rest for your binoculars. Even better, use a telescope. When it is full, there are no shadows, so look at it earlier in the month when shadows show craters and mountains. The moon presents a similar-sized disc (about 0.5 degree) as the sun, which is why total solar eclipses are so very spectacular. Remember the size, it is useful. It is about half a degree.

Venus is visible in the morning in May, before sunrise. Look to the east. It shows as a lemon-shaped, brilliant white object.

Have you ever seen Uranus? This is a good time to look for it. Use your binoculars (better yet, a telescope) and look to the left of Venus. On the morning of May 15, it is a bit more than twice the diameter of the moon away from Venus. There aren't any stars between Uranus and Venus that are as bright as Uranus this morning. If you see a "star" that is an unusual color, pastel blue, you have succeeded. It is about sixth magnitude, about the faintest "star" you can see without binoculars or a telescope in a clear, dark sky. It changes position relative to Venus due to Venus's motion. On May 13 it is about three degrees to the lower left of Venus. Venus passes Uranus on May 15 and by the morning of May 17, Uranus lies about two degrees above Venus in the morning sky.

Uranus is unique among the planets as it rolls on its side around the sun. Its pole always points in the same direction, so sometimes it rolls; otherwise, it skids. It is about four times the diameter of the earth, but appears tiny because it is so very far away, 1.93 billion miles.

Orion has set by the time the chart is drawn for, but if you look to the west around the May 26, you may spot Mercury. It is just off the northern foot of the north twin in Gemini.

As last month, I have added several stars plus their connecting lines where they form a recognizable pattern to the star chart this month. Like me, none of the stars I've added are very bright.

nouncement of the release of Grant in Aid funds for the Volcano School of the Arts' new campus, and I fully support the new models to education that VSAS provides its students," Ruderman said. "Students deserve quality options in education, and they are motivated by the kinds of challenges that charter schools like VSAS can provide. I am thrilled to support these innovators in education that are demonstrating what's possible, and learning what works, to put our students in the best possible position to succeed."

Rep. Richard Onishi said he is thrilled with the release of funding by the governor. Onishi said, "Good news. We have been working since last session to try to help get the funding released and what the school needed to do to have that happen." He said that this session he found out the money might lapse and helped make the release happen. The community support for the campaign was very important, he said. "Volcano School is very important because there is no school in that area, and it gives opportunity for those further out who want to attend the charter school."

The school's Governing Board is currently seeking applications for the upcoming term that starts in August. The Governing Board is responsible for the financial, organizational and academic viability of the charter school and implementation of the charter

The Board is made up of representatives from the community, staff and parents of children attending the school. Members serve two-year terms, staggered with members of the current Board. The representatives are elected by the current Board at the July meeting. Each member is expected to attend monthly meetings usually held on the third Thursday of each month at the Keakealani Campus, as well as to serve on at least one committee.

"Being a board member is such a rewarding experience," said Governing Board Chair John Broward. "Although there is a

Habitat for Humanity Starts Yurt Program for Home Ownership

Habitat for Humanity will soon erect a vurt on a one-acre lot in Ocean View. The program is open for applications from Ka'ū residents. Interested parties will soon be able complete the Habitat For Humanity Application For Housing. A Family Selection Committee will review all applications and select ideal candidates. The recipient agrees to give "500 sweat hours" of building with a team of volunteers. Upon completion of the yurt, the recipient will enjoy a 15- or 30-year, interest-free mortgage held by Habitat for Humanity with a mortgage lower than that of most other Habitat homes

The first yurt sponsored by Habitat for Humanity will be 30 feet in diameter and "706 not-so-square feet," says a statement from Habitat. The yurt will include a wrap-around lana'i, full bathroom, kitchen, bedroom, potential fireplace, loft, and water catchment, all on a one-acre ocean

State to Continue Medicaid Benefits for Ka'ū's Marshallese

The state of Hawai'i will continue to provide health benefits to Ka'ū's Marshallese community and other state Compact of Free Association residents until a full and final resolution of the issues in a lawsuit is reached, Attorney General David M. Louie announced last month. "The state will make sure that COFA residents continue to have uninterrupted access to their health benefits while this lawsuit is pending," Louie said.

COFA allows Palau, Marshall Islands and Federated States of Micronesia citizens, including Kaʻū's Marshallese community, to live and work in the United States in exchange for U.S. control of extensive strategic land and water in the Pacific Ocean. Some of the Marshall Islands were used by the United States government to test nuclear bombs more than 50 years ago.

Earlier in April, the Ninth Circuit ruled that when Congress enacted the Welfare Reform Act of 1996 and eliminated all federal funding for health benefits for COFA residents, the state of Hawai'i could not be mandated to fund the federal government's portion of the benefits. "The Ninth Circuit's decision confirms that the federal govern-

Inman has been a major voice in the specialty coffee industry for sustainable agriculture, environmental stewardship and social justice and served as president of the Specialty Coffee Association of America in 2008. His campaign to improve conditions in the coffee industry has taken him to local U.S. classrooms, the remote hills of Nicaragua and the floor of the United Nations. Since 2010, Inman served as president of World Coffee Events, which manages seven international coffee competitions, including the World Barista Championship. He is a trader at OLAM Specialty Coffee.

Hanacek is the founder and CEO of A.G.R.O. Roasters and AGRO Café and has extensively researched the current methods of production and consumption of specialty coffee. He has worked and studied in multiple countries and has met with international growers to discuss his Crop-to-Cup method. An accredited roaster, Hanacek has 5,000 hours behind a variety of coffee roasters.

In addition, Robert Curtiss, acting plant pest control manager with the Division of Plant Industry at the Hawai'i Department of Agriculture, will give a presentation Sunday at the Ka'ū Coffee College. Serving as the entomologist for West Hawai'i, Curtiss has experience working with insect taxonomy, semiochemicals and insect biological control.

The state of Hawai'i will continue to ment cannot impose a duty on states to periode health benefits to Ka'ū's Marshalcommunity and other state Compact of funds," Louie said.

Louie's comments followed a ruling by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals that the state can resume offering fewer health care benefits to Micronesian migrants than those given other citizens and legal residents eligible for Medicaid reimbursements.

For many years before Gov. Linda Lingle's administration, Hawai'i chose to include COFA citizens living here in its health insurance plans.

In 1996, Congress cut health care funding for migrants covered under COFA as part of comprehensive welfare reform. Then, when the Lingle administration attempted in 2009 and 2010 to reduce coverage because of fiscal challenges, U.S. District Judge J. Michael Seabright stopped it.

COFA residents argued to the Ninth Circuit that the state violated the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment by providing them less health coverage than citizens and legal residents eligible for Medicaid reimbursements, but the court disagreed. Farmers represented at the meeting have grown, coffee, mac nuts, taro, flowers, pigs, rabbits, sheep, goats, cattle, pumpkins, lettuce and other truck crops, as well as fruits, from banana to dragon fruit.

Farmers who attended the meeting included coffee grower Wally Young, who said he got into farming and became "caught by farming" after losing his longtime job in the sugar industry.

Rep. Richard Creagan said his farm was never in sugar. About half the land is in native 'ōhi'a, and the rest is in orchards and some vegetables.

Congress has authorized states to do exactly what Hawai'i has done here — determine the eligibility for, and terms of, state benefits for aliens ... with regard to whom Congress expressly gave states limited discretion."

"The battle is far from over," said Honolulu attorney Paul Alston regarding a decision allowing the state to reduce COFA migrants' Medicaid health care benefits. "We're going to take this to the end. We will not give up," Alston said, vowing to take it to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary, according to a story in the Honolulu Star-Advertiser.

Alston said that if benefits are cut, migrants would be forced into very costly emergency room treatment, "and some you're just going to kill. How crazy and how immoral is that?

"We got these people in our state who are allowed by federal law to be here from birth to death, and the (health care) program that the state is offering as a substitute is garbage," Alston told reporter Kristen Consillio. "All of this was done by the Lingle administration in a callous disregard for the health needs of this population. One would hope the Abercrombie administration would take a more economically rational and compassionate view as to how we treat these people who live among us."

A bond has been approved to fund the new Volcano Recycling Center. According to Jeffrey Mermel, who has worked for years on the issue with Volcano Community Association and other groups, the effort included seven years of meetings, petitions, emails, letters, testifying and "more meetings." He wrote to volunteers last month that "it appears your good efforts and persistence is about to pay off." Mermel, who chairs VCA's Environmental Committee, said that "special thanks must go to Councilors Brittany Smart and Brenda Ford, who along with Volcano's own Anne Lee, Chair of the Environmental Management Commission, succeeded in getting a bond passed through the Council to fund this project."
